dinner to th brooking address by jn b gzarland esq of trinity mr garland it is to be premised has until a very late period head opinions upon the subject of a local govt...the very opposite of these which have been entertained here and in the neighbouring outports, and as that gentleman is the proprietor of an establishment of very considerable magnitude and is therefore possessed of no very limited influence in the district in which he resides, such a concurrence in the general views of the inhabitants is extremely gratifying.

"I trust that nothing may ever emanate fm me either in thought or act which may be derogatory to that character i now glory in beyond all others - a conscientious and liberal british merchant". "commercial interests which I have at stake in the prsoprosperity of this Island"(and therefew there are in it perhpas have greater) in favour now of loc govt BUT 2many and local dffs to be surmounted before such an object can be impartially and successfully attainted - but not insurmountable

I am alike aware that even with others of my own commercial brethren in poole some opinions of mine may differ. " I am aware also gentlemen that in the promulgation of that opinions of theirs they have incurred your displeasure nay more they have become the subjects of open and public unkind reflections; - but genetlemen they are equally natives of that town which gave me birth of that town in which all my nearest and dearest ties have been formed. Pardon me therefore if even before you I stand forth as their champion. "extend towards them the hand oc christian fellowship(loud and contd cheering). need for change in st jns "but double force to those more remote quarters where even such remedies are not only inadequate-inefficient-but also uncertain, where the arm of power is alike impotent to protect the poor man fm the gripe of the rapacious rich one, as it is to preserve the just rich man fm the villainy of the designing knave
